Sunday School Book Study: "An Outline of An Anglican Life"

~ beginning March 3rd ~

Have you wondered why we worship the way we worship? What makes Anglicans different from other branches of Christ's church? Perhaps you need a refresher on what you have learned before, or perhaps you have many questions and would love to ask them in your church group. This simple yet thoughtful book is a good resource for a small group or Sunday school study on the important elements that make up the Anglican life; and also, how the Prayer Book is meant to be a rich resource that helps you in your spirituality and study. We hope that as many can join us as possible. Please invite any who might be curious about such a study. Books will be provided, but we ask you let us know if you will need one as soon as possible. Contact Scott McDonald or Amanda Roberts if you are interested in the study.

Acolyte Training

February 23rd, 9:00 a.m.

For any interested in serving as acolyte, you are welcome to come to a training session for acolytes. We also ask current acolytes to attend, if possible, so that we can be sure to give any updates or information regarding any changes that have occurred throughout this year. Please contact Fr. Isaac in person or by e-mail (ic2705@yahoo.com) to let him know of your interest.

Building Communication and Planning

Please be on the lookout for communication concerning the building in the upcoming week. Communication will come in two forms:

1. Personal contact - A team leader will ask if you would be interested in serving on a team or do certain tasks.
2. The blog will work as a news board for the building move, and we will provide documents, information, and updates through the process as we progress throughout the weeks and months.

With the team leaders contacting you and the blog providing you updates and information, you should be able to get plugged into the place you would want to help, as well as be informed of the timeframe for helping and whether or not the job is still on schedule. For now, please contact Dorathea Fortener or Scott McDonald regarding what interest you might have in helping; they will record that and work to get you involved at the right time.

We are thankful for any help you can provide and ask for your prayers throughout the months to come for the building move to honor God and to be done well and in good timing.
